📋 Pre-Trade & Post-Trade Checklist

🕒 1. Risk & Money Management Blueprint

Rule Explanation Example for ₹1 L capital

Risk per trade: Never risk more than 2%–2.5% of total capital on a single trade. Max risk $\approx$ ₹2,000–₹2,500 per trade.

Position sizing: Decide quantity based on your SL distance. If SL = ₹5, you can take $\sim$ 500 qty (₹2,500/₹5). Keeps losses limited even if SL hits.

Daily loss limit: Stop trading for the day if total loss reaches ₹3,000 ($\approx$ 3%). Prevents revenge trades. Weekly loss limit: If down ₹6,000–₹8,000, pause for review. Controls emotional spiral.

Reward-to-Risk target: Aim for minimum 1:2 RR. If risking ₹2,000, target ₹4,000+. Allows profit even with 50–60% accuracy.

💡 Key rule: After SL taken, If setup re-forms, take a fresh trade with new SL and defined size.

🧘 2. Psychological Conditioning Routine

Before the Trade

Ask: “What’s my risk in ₹, not my hope in ₹?”

Define entry–SL–target before clicking Buy.

Visualize the worst case ➡️ “If SL hits, I’ll lose ₹2,000 and walk away calmly.”
It desensitizes your mind before emotions rise.

During the Trade

Do not watch every tick. Check chart only at candle close (as per your TF).

Use OCO (one cancels other) orders for SL + Target.

Avoid re-entry within 15 min after an emotional exit.

After the Trade

Win: Record reason + exit quality (Did I exit too early or well?).

Loss: Write if it was within rules or emotion-driven.

Every weekend: Review your last 10 trades → note recurring emotional mistakes (fear exits, hesitation, averaging, etc.).

This log is your “trader’s mirror.” After 4–6 weeks, patterns become obvious — and conviction naturally grows.

3. Pre-Trade & Post-Trade Checklist

Pre-Trade

Setup matches my tested pattern

Risk defined and position size calculated

SL & Target placed in system

Emotion check → I’m calm, not chasing

Post-Trade

Conviction-Building Practice

To strengthen patience & conviction:

Backtest at least 50 trades of your pattern (write RR, hit rate).

Once proven, trade it for next 20 live trades with same rules — no deviation.

Focus on execution quality, not profit per trade.

Conviction is a muscle. Every rule-based trade — win or loss — makes it stronger.
